ENEL WINS THE OSCAR DI BILANCIO FINANCIAL COMMUNICATIONS AWARD

The Company wins the FERPI award in the Large Groups and Listed Companies category

Fulvio Conti: "Comprehensive and effective financial statements form the bedrock of dialogue with all of our stakeholders"

Milan, November 30th 2009 – Enel has won Italy's "Oscar di Bilancio" financial communications award in the Large Corporation and Listed Company category. This prestigious award is handed out each year by FERPI (the Italian Federation of Public Relations) to companies and organizations that have published the best financial, social and environmental reports and deployed effective, ongoing and innovative communications to all stakeholders.

The Awards Panel stated that it was rewarding Enel for "financial statements characterized by high levels of detailed, transparent information. The company's mission and performance are effectively and thoroughly presented, not just with regard to the accounts; environmental information disclosure is also comprehensive, and the sustainability report has been further enhanced by being tailored into a specific section. Notably, the company holds regular meetings with the financial community, and offers an opportunity to follow presentations of its annual results and five-year business plan via a streamed broadcast on its website. The company's corporate governance report is comprehensive too."

Enel CEO and General Manager Fulvio Conti remarked: "We are proud to receive this award. Major companies like Enel have specific accounting, environmental and social reporting responsibilities to all of their stakeholders. Publishing comprehensive and detailed company reports that are easy to understand and effective is the bedrock of dialogue with our many stakeholders in 24 countries around the globe, and one reason why 1.9 million shareholders trust us and have invested in our company."
