ENEL CONFIRMED IN THE FTSE4Good INDEX

The company led by Fulvio Conti is once again included in the prestigious sustainability index thanks to its Environmental, Social and Governance (ESG) performance.

The inclusion in the FTSE4Good index stands alongside the Enel Group's participation in the world's leading sustainability indices, such as the Dow Jones Sustainability Index and the Carbon Disclosure Project.

Rome, April 23rd, 2013 - The Enel Group has retained its position in the prestigious FTSE4Good index, which measures the conduct of companies in the areas of the fight against climate change, governance, respect for human rights and the fight against corruption. Enel has also maintained its overall score of 4 out of 5 in ESG (Environmental – Social – Governance) performance.

Created by the FTSE Group, a global leader in indexing, the FTSE4Good index series is designed to encourage investment in companies that meet globally recognised corporate responsibility standards. The companies in the FTSE4Good index meet strict social and environmental standards and are considered capable of capitalising the benefits of conducting business responsibly.

With this achievement, Enel confirms its leading position in the world's main sustainability indices: for the last nine years, the Group has been included in the prestigious Dow Jones Sustainability Index Europe and the selective World index. In addition, in 2012 it was admitted to the CDLI – Carbon Disclosure Leadership Index Italy - designed by the Carbon Disclosure Project, setting the standard, for the second year in a row, for disclosures on the fight against climate change.

Enel press releases have all now smartphone and tablet versions.
